An additional 54 patients with malignancy diagnosed on the initial evaluation were excluded, leaving 148 patients in the study cohort (77 men and 71 women; mean age, 57 years).

The attacks are usually associated with redness of the eyes, tearing, nasal congestion and eyelid edema.